

. | T T R

Governor Isaac Stevens arrived in the capitol of Washington Territory on November 25, 1853. A year later, he set out to secure Indian treaties that would open the territory for sustained white settlement of the region. From 1854 to 1856, Isaac Stevens journeyed across Washington State and into the modern states of Oregon, Idaho, and Montana meeting with tribes at ten treaty councils. Written, pictorial and oral history accounts of the

